LITTLE BLACK BOOK
(Instructions)

REMEMBER WHEN you were in high school and kept all your girl friends' names in that little black book? Well, I found mine the other day. Here . . . take a look at it. My little black book. I'll flip through it for you. Boy, does this bring back memories . . . ah, yes, there's Wanda, Bonnie, Sarah (man, you should have seen the dress she wore to the homecoming dance!), Harriet, Sue Ellen, Gloria, . . . and the twins, Jane and Joanne, plus a bunch of others.

"You know what? I had a premonition last night. It really scared me. You see, one of the names in my little black book came suddenly into my mind, right in the middle of the night. I saw her face so clearly . . . like in a vision. And for some strange reason . . . something compelled me, I guess . . . I wrote down her name, along with her old telephone number. Then I put what I wrote in an envelope . . . see, here it is . . . I'll just leave it on the table. And in some far-out, haunting way, I knew that at some time in the near future, someone— perhaps you—would bring that name to light.

"Let's try and discover if my premonition had any grounds in reality. I'll just flip through my little black book, and you tell me where to stop. Say when. Oh, here? Let's take a look. You stopped me at what name? GERALDINE. Read it and remember her telephone number too. GERALDINE, MA-7-3550. All right? Good. Now I'll open the envelope, and we'll see if my premonition had any basis in fact or in truth.

"Will you look at that? GERALDINE, MA-7-3550. The exact name and telephone number I wrote down last night.

"But you see, in truth the mystery runs even deeper. Because last night, I had trouble finding something to write this down on. So I rummaged through an old drawer quickly for a slip of paper to write down Geraldine's name and phone number. This is the paper I found. And it wasn't until this morning that I discovered, much to my own surprise, that I accidentally wrote the name and number right on the back of Geraldine's old high school senior picture—and there she is—the sweetheart of Gordon High School!"
