Effect:

Three cards are chosen by cutting the deck into three piles. The magician claims he has predicted the top three cards in his amazing prediction.

Upon showing his prediction, it is shown to have a whole mix of different parts of playing cards. This mixed up picture shows parts of different cards and the magician points to various vague parts of cards stating that those are the selections. After performing this amazing feat, the magician turns the prediction around showing the words 'YOU MAY NOW CLAP'.

After receiving his thunderous applause, the magician states that he did indeed predict the cards correctly. The prediction is actually a piece of paper folded several times. Upon opening the first fold of the prediction, a copy of the first selection is revealed. The second fold reveals a larger copy of the second selection. When the prediction is completely unfolded, it shows a giant picture of the last selection!

The magician then refolds the prediction back to its original size with the words 'YOU MAY NOW CLAP' facing the audience and receives his well deserved round of applause.
