EFFECT:

After performing several card effects, the magician explains he will do just one more trick.

A spectator is asked to select a card from the deck (the same pack of cards which the performer has been using during his entire act) and show the card to the rest of the audience.

The spectator is then asked to replace the card, shuffle the deck, and cut the deck as many times as is desired.

Without any suspicious moves, the magician places the entire deck back into its' case, and closes the box. Both hands are showing otherwise empty and both sides of the case are shown.

Explaining he will not only reveal the spectators selection, but cause it to escape from the deck itself, the magician holds the deck with his left hand in a horizontal position, then his right hand is used to give the deck a "tap" - the spectator sees his selection visually fall to the table! . . .
