"For those who do not already know," writes David Britland, "Juan Tamariz is one of the leading Spanish magicians. A highly skilled close-upper and stand-up performer, an innovator, a superb comic and a commercial magician with many TV appearances and his own show to his credit." In Sonata he has collected a part of his professional repertory, purified and improved over the last 20 years. This is a book of tricks, effects, routines and moves, a practical counterpoint to his theoretical works, which, with books like THE FIVE POINTS IN MAGIC, or THE MAGIC WAY, represent an important milestone in the magical library.

"These routines are not an intellectual exercise," writes Tamariz in the introduction, "but were born, have evolved, have suffered the real test, in front of an audience, have been modified, in an attempt, through a slow, neverending alchemical process, to purify them, make them richer, to quimerically transform them into gold."
